Are the creators of FIFA and PES completely disconnected? I know you can get an objective view from the comments below, but it'd be nice to here from the people who actually worked on the game. The tweaks are already slightly noticeable in team mode, but the real attention to detail will show in the high-intensity game, on the new human motion tech, and in potentially-all new player animations. Thanks, MDH. What are the differences? What are the areas of improvement? What have you tried to focus on? Be sure to include as much detail as you possibly can to ensure that the folks reading this make their own informed decisions. There's a lot of talk of the new motion-captured animations and player behaviors. What are some of the areas that you are not able to discuss? I don't mean to throw stones, but what is a little bit frustrating is the fact that you are not able to share any of the data you collect from the motion capture suit, to reassure you that everything's on the up and up. We have painstakingly captured every player's movements and challenges in a 3D environment, and now it's your turn. This is something that clearly went beyond the scope of the game designers' expertise to create. In the past, players have picked up on FIFA in tournaments and said that this is better. Can you confirm this? What is it that makes the improvements here? What is this new tech? We've used this technology in the "Laser" game engine since 2000. Our engineers have enhanced the engine to allow the players to be more 3D and use the player's entire body. We've done this because "Laser" is the most powerful engine for building 3D games. We have seen that it's one of the most compelling features for the players. FIFA talked about making players seem more 3D and so their motions seem more realistic. What have you been able to do with the motion capture data to make this happen? We use a collection of sensors - one that's being embedded in the player's skin. It's composed of a number of tiny sensors. By having that tiny collection of sensors embedded in the body, we can measure a number of measures on the player's position while on the pitch. This includes: - Position and movement: Every position is documented at all the levels. This is important, because in team match
