Q: How to find a record by a changed field in MongoDB? I've been trying to work this one out for a while, but can't seem to figure it out. I'm using the Mongo version of Node.js and I'm trying to find a record by looking at a field that has been changed from an element of a list. Let's say I have this list of objects in memory: `exports.object_list = [ { year: 2010, name: "Foo", id: 1 }, { year: 2012, name: "Bar", id: 2 } ]`; With some action on my user interface, I can change the year property of one of the objects in the list, to make the query object like this: `exports.user_object = [ { year: 2010, name: "Foo", id: 1 }, { year: 2012, name: "Bar", id: 2 }, // This is just a placeholder // The record user_object would have changed { year: 2012, name: "Foo", id: 1 }, // The record in the user_object object should be matched { year: 2012, name: "Bar", id: 2 } ]` I don't know how I could go about searching to get the changed record that should be in this list. The goal is to get the record that was changed, so that I can update it in the database. A:

In a new series of hilarious memes, dog owners show their pets behind bars to prove that they're not the world's best lover, or at least attempt to show them how they can use more than just their teeth. One Twitter user, @CreatureNerd, decided to share a collection of such sweet messages between his dog and himself. He said he received "literally hundreds" of replies along with a few dog-related questions. "Since my dog very obviously seems to be a very sexual, copulating machine, it seems only fitting that I make her a bit of a boobie doll," he said. "The best part is that I'm sure those dogs' owners will love it for years to come." Risk of gastrointestinal inflammation with regular linseed oil intake.
