The future success of successful trials of herbal medicinal products. The authors describe a meeting organised by the European Medicine Agency (EMA) to discuss a range of important issues with regard to bringing herbal medicinal products to the market. The main focus was on the development of a single European register for herbal medicinal products, as well as the establishment of guidelines on herbal medicinal product labelling, formulation, manufacturing, stability, quality and toxicology, including the assessment of efficacy and safety. As part of this process, the EMA was asked to identify herbal medicinal products for evaluation, but it was stressed that these will need to be identified at national level. However, where national authorities make specific decisions on the identity of herbal medicinal products, the EMA may need to be consulted.

When the 2015-16 season kicks off on Oct. 12, the Columbus Blue Jackets will kick off the NHL season in their new arena, Nationwide Arena. Yes, the Jackets are the newest team to play in the Blue Cross Arena, but not to worry, the new home has become an oasis from hockey players — it makes it easy to take a break. “I can’t even remember the last time I was even there,” said defenseman Ryan Murray. “It’s super easy, but also not easy when you’re practicing there for three days. There are a lot of hallways and it’s really busy. It’s a funny place.” The Blue Jackets’ new arena is easier to navigate than most modern NHL arenas. Its spacing and geometry are better suited to a hockey rink. Their new home will be more accommodating than Nationwide Arena, which is old school by NHL standards. As they prepare for their first game in front of a sellout crowd, Blue Jackets players and fans are happy about the new digs. But the season won't be their first in their new home. They played there nearly a dozen years ago for half a season. "The main thing I remember about it is when we played there in 2008-09, there were some lights that didn't work," said Blue Jackets head coach John Tortorella. "And I don't think they've got them working yet. We didn't even skate when we first went there." This season will be a different story. The new arena has a number of features that will allow for the
