Mutations of the deoxyribonuclease II (DNase II, EC 3.1.21.3) gene (Xp11.4) are associated with late-onset Alzheimer's disease (AD) in western countries. We examined whether this association is also present in a Japanese population. Among fifty DNA samples positive for the DNase II gene as determined by polymerase chain reaction-restriction fragment length polymorphism (PCR-RFLP), twenty-three DNase II gene mutations were found, and the alleles were compared with the DNase II gene alleles reported in the NCBI database. Of the 23 DNase II gene alleles, two alleles (DXS1005T/T and T/t) were significantly associated with the disease, but the allele T/t was not associated. No DNase II gene mutations were found in the remaining 27 samples. Our results suggest that mutations of the DNase II gene (DXS1005) might be a genetic factor for late-onset AD in the Japanese population.Q: How to remove the x-axis labels and their spacing on matplotlib's plot_tight_grid?
