The new in-game features include more realistic gameplay, while still using the FIFA 22 engine to offer constant innovation. The goalkeepers are now able to pounce on loose balls, while the tackling and off-the-ball AI has been improved. The player styles have been refined, and the pressure generated by the ball is no longer too soft. Teammates are more aware of their presence on the pitch and how to get open. Additionally, being close to the ball allows players to receive passes from the outfield. FIFA 22 also features improved ball control with Player Trajectories, which allow you to guide the ball like never before. Several new passing options have been added, including the ability to pass up, on the run, or sideways - giving players more creative control in the final third. FIFA 22 finalizes a new "Shot Power" feature with which you can decide who is going to get power-assisted shots, which improve a user's ability to hit shots out of the reach of most opposition defenders. FIFA 22 introduces the Tackling Control System (TCS), which allows you to control the tackle and recover by performing small movements. This also makes it easier for defenders to control the ball-carrier as he takes the ball in a different direction to the one he originally intended. The Tackling Control System has two layers: the simpler Triggering System - which forces the user to tackle when he makes contact with the ball - and the Defensive Bias, which forces the user to tackle with a bias towards his right. The Defensive Bias has been developed in conjunction with international players, and the new defensive systems provide a greater variety of situations when being tackled. FIFA 22 includes the Player Trajectories for the first time, which allows players to run and change direction at the same time as they are heading towards the ball. Trajectories are composed of curves, which are influenced by the player's speed, acceleration, ball possession, and his or her height from the ground, while also varying based on the player's angle in relation to the ball. The new Trajectories System also allows for more realistic dribbling. Players are able to control the direction of the ball with more subtle motions, and this allows dribbling moves to be performed in several directions - without the need to always predict where the ball is going.
